How libraries build a better Internet

1) Once upon a time, libraries were the Internet – a network of knowledge hubs, accessible to all

2) Now the Internet helps libraries achieve their goal: universal access to Information… and libraries in turn help realise the Internet's potential

3) They offer free access, so that everyone can get online

4) They build users' knowledge, skills and confidence

5) They advocate for users' privacy and rights

6) They make sure digital works are still available tomorrow

Find out more about IFLA's work on libraries in the information society: www.ifla.org/information-society

IFLA